

as seen in
GQ, DECEMBER 2009

LOOK SHARP + LIVE SMART

OUR ANNUAL *MEN OF THE YEAR ISSUE

Starring

TOM BRADY
BARACK
OBAMA

THE 'HANGOVER'
BROS
CHRIS PINE

THE MEN OF 'TRUE
BLOOD'

JOSEPH
GORDON-
LEVITT

KOBE
BRYANT

TOM FORD

NEIL
PATRICK
HARRIS

ALEC
BALDWIN

THE TWITTER GUYS

AND OUR OBSESSION OF THE YEAR

(HINT: ALL
THE GIRLS ARE GOSSIPING ABOUT HER)

*BADASS OF THE YEAR

M Best Stuff 2009

→
5 of 10

↑ Ikea PS Rasken Bench
$100 | www.ikea.com

Chef'n FreshForce Juicer →
$20 | www.chefn.com

• Zen and the Art of Ikea Assembly

The PS Rasken bench defies all expectations of Ikea furniture. It's made of actual wood, not particleboard, and assembles without tools; your weight locks the pieces into place when you sit, a trick adapted from traditional African chairs. Still, you may be skeptical. Surely it will wobble, or creak disconcertingly. But the Rasken is rock solid. At $100, it may not be stupid cheap, but it's pretty damn reasonable—and like we said, easy to put together.

“Why is this the best juicer ever? Because the double hinge gets more out of every squeeze. Which means less time preparing cocktails and more time drinking them.”

Kevin Sintumuang
GQ associate editor

↓ Panasonic Lumix DMC-GF1 Digital Camera
$900 | www.panasonic.com

• It's the Size of the Lenses That Matters

Many of us want to take better pictures; not all of us want to carry around DSLRs, those enormous digital cameras you see pros using on the sidelines of sporting events. The new GF1, with its relatively compact body, is your answer. It's a cross between an Everyman-friendly point-and-shoot and a more professional camera. Plus, you can interchange its lenses, allowing you to experiment with different types—that is, once you learn exactly what ISOs and f-stops are all about.

